

Image of Charged Particle Directional Spectrometer instrument

The Charged Particle Directional Spectrometer instrument is designed to measure the charge, energy, and direction of a particle that passes through the instrument. There are 13 separate detectors inside the CPDS that are arranged in a stack. The three A-detectors are 1mm thick silicon dE/dx detectors.